

colombia las veraneras

natural sudan rume

blackberry | cocoa powder | green apple | hibiscus from one of our longest relationships, we feature another coffee from rodrigo sanchez. his coffee from el progreso is recognizable as our yearly house coffee. this year, we've also purchased coffees from his other farms, this lot from his newest project at las veraneras.

las veraneras is the culmination of years of cultivation experience. we visited this stunning farm in 2023 while spending time with rodrigo and his family. the farm is planted primarily with exotic varieties, and this lot is no exception. consisting of 100% sudan rume variety, this coffee is bursting with character. sudan rume, as its name suggests, is a landrace variety from the boma plateau in southern sudan. not necessarily a high yield variety, its usefulness is demonstrated in its resistance to leaf rust, coffee berry disease, and cup quality.

this particular lot is processed as a natural. coffee with brix measurements of 23-25 are picked and allowed to rest for 36 hours. the coffee is then floated to remove any defects, and then laid to dry in shaded canopies for 25-28 days depending on climate.
